

Developers relaunch sales for Okan Tower, ending Covid pause

Erik Bojnansky | January 25, 2022

Okan Tower, a proposed 700-foot-tall mixed-use project, will break ground in June following a pause in construction due to the Covid-19 pandemic.

Bekir Okan, chairman of the Istanbul-based Okan Group, announced that sales were relaunched for the Miami project, at 555 N. Miami Ave.. during a Monday press conference at Okan Tower Miami Residences' sales office.

Edgardo Defortuna, president of Miami-based Fortune International Group, whose company was tapped to head sales for Okan Tower, declined to say how many units have been sold so far.

"We restarted two-and-a-half months ago. It is a big tower with a lot of units," Defortuna told the Business Journal. "We've been pleased with the response so far, but we have a long [way] to go."

The project will consist of 163 luxury Sky Residences that start at the 51st floor, with penthouses priced as high as $3 million. Okan will also have 236 condo-hotel units managed by Hilton Hotel & Resort, the cheapest and smallest of which will be a suite approximately 450 square feet in size and starting at $380,000. A recent report from the Florida Realtors stated that the median price for a condo unit in Miami-Dade County is $355,000.

Asked about the need for affordable housing in Miami, where apartments, condos, and homes are becoming more unaffordable — which is a growing problem for employers in the area — Mayor Francis Suarez replied that the answer is developing even more residential projects.

"When we increase the supply, we should be able to reduce prices," he said at the event.

South Florida Business Journal is published in three regional editions covering Miami-Dade, Palm Beach and Broward.
